PREFACE.

WE are indebted to Prof. William Carey Morey, of Rochester University, New York, for the accompanying Preface. He has had direct recourse to all authorities and original records in various counties in New York State.

The name of this family occurs at a very early period in the colonial records of New England. The diversity in the spelling of proper names, which was, at that time, common, has a striking illustration in the varied orthography of this surname. Mory, Morey, Morie, Morry, Moorey, Moorie, Mooree, Mowry, Mowrey, Mawry, are some of the forms. These do not, of course, indicate any distinction between different families; for the name of the same person is often spelled in several ways in the same collection of records, often in a single document. In the process of time, however, it has come to be cast into two distinct and somewhat permanent forms, Morey and Mowry; the former prevailing in the families of Plymouth, Mass., and in Southern Rhode Island, and the latter in those of Boston.

The question as to the mutual relationship between these has not been clearly settled. Indeed, it seems to be quite certain that their common origin must be sought, not in New England, but in the mother country. There were, evidently, a number of families, which, though they may have been related in England, became distinct sources of genealogical descent in this part of the world.

To give some conception of how many family stems were transplanted from Old England and became the beginnings of separate domestic groups in New England, certain references have been collated to the earliest settlers of this name. In his "List of Emigrants to America, 1600-1700," Hotten refers to two persons only of this name. The one, "Jo. Mory," aged nineteen years, was a passenger of the ship "Blessing," June, 1635. The other, "George Morrey, aged 23 yrs.," was a passenger in the "Truelove," in September of the same year. This George settled in Duxbury, in the Plymouth Colony, and several references are made to him, in colonial records, between 1635 and 1640. In the latter year he died, leaving, it is supposed, no children. The John above mentioned is not again noticed for many years, but he has been identified as the John Mowry who appears in Providence record of 1666, and to whom we shall again refer.

Besides these immigrants mentioned by Hotten, Mr. Savage, in his "Genealogical Dictionary of the First Settlers of New England," mentions seven other persons by the name of Morey, who settled in America previous to 1700. These are: Benjamin, of Wickford, 1674; Francis, of Salem, 1686; Jonathan, of Plymouth, 1666; Joseph, of Wickford, 1674; Nathaniel, of Providence, 1666; Roger, of Providence, 1649; and Thomas, of Roxbury, 1673. The question is suggested, how nearly these were related to each other. The records of Boston show that Roger arrived in Massachusetts in 1631; he was, therefore, the earliest settler in New England bearing this family name. Benjamin, of Wickford, is identified by Savage as the person who is recorded as receiving a bequest from Isaac Heath, in 1660, and this Benjamin is now admitted to have been a son of Roger. Jonathan, of Plymouth, and Thomas, of Roxbury, are also now regarded by all genealogists as having been sons of Roger.

The Nathaniel mentioned by Savage first appears in the records of Providence as having purchased a piece of land in 1666, and as having been associated with his brother John in the ownership of certain lands in 1668. That this John was the brother of Nathaniel, and that he is the person who came to America in the "Blessing," 1635, are opinions well supported by Mr. William A. Mowry, the author of the work entitled "Nathaniel Mowry and his Descendants." These two brothers have also been supposed to be the sons of Roger; an opinion expressed by Mr. J. O. Austin, in his "Genealogical Dictionary of Rhode Island." Whether this view is sufficiently based upon authentic data, is a question. It is quite as likely that they were more remotely related to Roger.

Of the other names mentioned by Savage, Joseph, of Wickford, arrived in Rhode Island in 1674. It is declared by his descendants that he was born in England, in 1664, and must, therefore, be regarded as the founder of a distinct family in America; some of the members of which are now living in Columbia County, N. Y.

In addition to these, there should not be passed over the names of two other persons who settled in New England previous to 1700. The first of these was George Morey, of Bristol, R. I., who took the freeman's oath in 1685; who afterwards removed to Norton, Mass., and became the founder of a large family, with a number of distinguished members. The other person was Capt. Nicholas Morey, of whom there is preserved a definite record to the effect that he came to America in 1675, from East Woodham, County Hampshire; that he was the third son of Thomas and Mary Morey of that place, and that his brothers, John, Thomas, and Edward, were living in England when he left. It may be that the place here mentioned was the ancestral home of all the children in America, who are now so far separated that they cannot unite the broken links in their chain of descent. As Capt. Nicholas left no children, we may conclude, from what has been previously stated, that the following persons were the founders of distinct families in New England:—

1. Roger Morey, of Plymouth, Salem, and Providence, who arrived in New England in 1631, and who was undoubtedly the father of Jonathan, of Plymouth, Thomas, of Roxbury, and Benjamin, of Roxbury, Mass., and of Kingston, R. I.

2. The brothers, John and Nathaniel Mowry, of Providence, who are first mentioned in the records of 1666 and 1668, and whose descendants, only, have preserved the spelling of Mowry.

3. Joseph Morey, of Wickford, who was born in 1664, and arrived in Rhode Island in 1674.

4. George Morey, of Bristol, who is first mentioned as having taken the freeman's oath in 1685.

So far as can be, at present, determined, these must have been heads of separate families in New England. From their original seats, these families have spread into other parts of the Eastern States, and during the last century, especially at the beginning of the Revolutionary period, they passed into New York State, settling along the Hudson, in the present counties of Orange, Ulster, Dutchess, Rensselaer, Columbia, Albany, and Saratoga; from which they have gone on into various parts of the United States.

The accompanying sketch will be confined to accounts of Roger Morey; principally to that line of his descendants which became united with the Bogman family.

ONE BRANCH OF THE MOREY FAMILY.

As Roger Morey seems to have been a close follower of Roger Williams ever after their arrival in America, it is probable that the two set sail from England in the same ship, "The Lion," which left Bristol, Dec. 1, 1630, and arrived at Boston, Feb. 5, 1631. They both took the free-man's oath of fidelity in Boston on the same day, May 8, 1631.

It has been recently discovered that Roger Morey's wife was Mary, daughter of John and Margery Johnson.

"Oct. 12, 1659, Roger Morey, of Providence, and Mary, his wife, being the eldest daughter of John Johnson, late of Roxbury, in Suffolk, in the Massachusetts Colony of New England, deceased, for £60, deeded to William Parkes, of Roxbury, that one-sixth part of the estate of said Johnson, devised to them by his will, dated Sept. 30, 1659."

April 12, 1631, Roger Williams was called to Salem, Mass., to become an assistant to Rev. Mr. Skelton, the pastor over the church in that place. Hither Roger Morey followed, became a member of the church in 1636; January, 1637, he entered into an agreement with the town, "that he should begin the keeping of all the town's cattle the fifth of the second month, and so to continue eight months, with the help of another efficient man." A pleasant picture of the united fortunes of the little community is suggested by the next clause. "He was to be ready at the pen gate, an hour after sunrise, to take the herds. Those [persons] who did not have their cattle ready were to bring them after the others," and drive them to the common feeding-ground, where the two helpers were set to guard against all the dangers that beset this young settlement in the wilderness. This was, evidently, not his sole dependence, for, the month following this agreement, he bought and laid out fifty acres of land, Feb. 20, 1637. Here his second son, Jonathan², was baptized, April 2; and Dec. 25 of the same year his name was on the list of inhabitants, with the record of his having a family of five members.

Roger Morey continued to accumulate land and to have the herds in his keeping until 1643, when he had sold his land in the woods and removed to Providence, R. I., where Roger Williams, banished by the General Court of Massachusetts, "for having preached and divulged new and dangerous opinions against the authority of magistrates," had commenced to plant on the Moshassuck River, and which "for the many Providences of the Most High and Only Wise, I called Providence." "Here, all over the colony, a great number of weak and distressed souls, scattered and flying hither from Old England and New England, the Most Holy and Only Wise hath, in his infinite wisdom, provided this country and this corner as a shelter for the poor and persecuted, according to their several persuasions."

Again Roger¹ Morey was declared freeman, in this new town of Providence, in 1655; and on May 25, 1655, he was "appointed by the Court of Commissioners to keep a house of entertainment; and a convenient sign was to be set out, at a most perspicuous place of said house, to give notice to strangers." In 1656 he had a house-lot laid out to him "upon the hill over against Roger Williams, his meadow"; he was commissioner in 1658, juryman in 1661, and bought a lot of land in 1661.

There is evidence that his wife was nearly allied to the Heaths, of Roxbury. Isaac Heath, in his will, Jan. 21, 1661, bequeaths twenty shillings to his kinswoman, Mary Morey; and on Jan. 1, 1664, Elizabeth, the widow of Isaac Heath, left a legacy of ten shillings to Mary Morey, and a like sum to her son, Thomas Morey.

May 6, 1669, Roger's widow, Mary, applied for administration on his estate, he having made a will and left her executrix. In 1671 she sold the dwelling-house, out-housing, three house-lots and commoning to one Stephen Paine, of Rehoboth, Mass. She, later, married John Kingsley and removed to Rehoboth, where she was buried, Jan. 29, 1679.

From this Jonathan⁴ to the Thomas⁵ who emigrated from Rhode Island to New York State, at the beginning of the Revolutionary period, there is a lack of recorded data. The earliest years of this Thomas⁵ are unchronicled. But, in the Calendar of the New York Historical MSS. his name is given as one of the signers of the "Association," June, 1775. Previous to 1778, he was a resident of Albany County, and a member of the Thirteenth Albany County Regiment, under Col. Van Vechten. After some changes, he bought one hundred acres of land in Milton, Saratoga County, and established himself as a farmer. Soon after the expiration of his term of office, he returned to Tecumseh, and then, after a few years, removed to Adrian, Mich., where he practised law, until advancing age and failing health caused him to retire from active life and to make his home with his daughter at Marion, Ohio, where he died Oct. 29, 1881. "He was an able and energetic lawyer, and his labors in the office of attorney-general, in the early history of the State, have left their powerful and beneficent impress upon the judicial and legislative history of the State, which can never pass away."

Of Rev. REUBEN⁷, the fifth child of Samuel⁶ and Mary (Freeman) Morey, we give the accompanying extract from the "Baptist Encyclopædia": —

"Rev. Reuben⁷ Morey was born in Fabius, Onondaga County, N. Y., Feb. 21, 1805; obtained a hope in Christ in early life, and united with the Baptist Church. Having strong convictions that it was his duty to preach the gospel, he, soon after his conversion, began the work of preparation. He was educated at the Hamilton Literary and Theological Institution and at Brown University.

"Dr. Wayland was president at Brown while he was there, and left upon his student the impress of his own strong intellect and powerful grasp of truth. Dr. J. R. Loomis, the president of Lewisburg University, Dr. Ives, of Sheffield, Conn., and Dr. William Dean, of Bangkok, Siam, were among his intimate friends at college.

"After his graduation from Brown (1835), he was ordained and settled as pastor of the Baptist Church in Madison, Ind. His subsequent pastorates were in Louisville, Ky., North Attleborough, Mass., Homer, Wyoming, and Arcade, N. Y., Delavan and Tonica, Ill., and Merton, Wis. His longest pastorate was at North Attleborough, where he remained eight years.

"His preaching was analytical and doctrinal. He had a profound reverence for the ministerial office, and imparted depth and solemnity to his public services. As a pastor, he was peculiarly gifted for efficient labor in the family and with the individual. He was a tower of strength in all his pastoral labors with his flock. His home during the closing years of his life was in Waukesha, Wis. Here he fell asleep in Jesus, May 17, 1880. 'Mark the perfect man and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace.'"

To this report of the pastor we here subjoin that of the father, written by his son, Prof. William Carey Morey:—

"His principal characteristics were, I think, his unswerving integrity and his stern devotion to what he believed to be right. He was never charged with dishonesty in thought or in action. He was a man of great moral courage, and never hesitated to face the result of his convictions. He possessed an analytical and logical mind, which was always apparent in his conversation and in his preaching."

A companion sketch is given in Prof. Morey's delineation of his mother:—

"My mother was a wonderful combination of a keen intellect and a warm heart. She possessed rare mental insight and an unusual capacity for clear and close reasoning. She was very social in her disposition, and was distinguished for her conversational powers. Her sympathies were inexhaustible, whether directed toward her family or her friends, and all her warm maternal and social impulses were purified by a sincere and profound religious spirit."

Rev. Reuben⁷ Morey married Abby Clemons Bogman, of Providence, R. I., April 5, 1836.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE:

1. MARIANNE⁸, b. in Indiana, July 23, 1838; d. Aug. 14, 1838.

10. ADDIE LAVINIA⁸, b. Nov. 14, 1857.

The following is a copy of a paper received from California:—

MILITARY ORDER OF THE LOYAL LEGION OF THE UNITED STATES.

HEADQUARTERS COMMANDERY OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 9, 1885.

IN MEMORIAM.

JOSEPH WARREN⁸ MOREY, first lieutenant of Company K, 17th N. Y. Infantry, U. S. Vols., died at Santa Rosa, Cal., Saturday, Jan. 31, 1885.

Joseph Warren Morey was a native of North Attleborough, Mass., and was born in 1841. When he was seven years of age, his parents removed to Wyoming, N. Y., where he remained until the outbreak of the Rebellion, when he at once enlisted, April 22, 1861, as a private in the 17th Regiment of Infantry, New York Volunteers. He served in the Fifth Corps of the Army of the Potomac, and participated in the battles of Hanover Court House, the Seven Days at the Peninsula, Second Bull Run (where he was severely wounded), Antietam, Fredericksburg, and Chancellorsville.

He was promoted first lieutenant, Dec. 1, 1862, for gallant and meritorious services, and was honorably mustered out of service by reason of expiration of term, June 2, 1863. He then entered the State University of Michigan, and afterwards attended Rush Medical College, where he took the degree of A. M., and was graduated in 1866. He settled in Illinois, practising his profession until 1881, when he removed to Santa Rosa, Cal., where he has since resided.

He was elected a Companion of the First Class of our Order, Feb. 6, 1884; Insignia, No. 3,115.

His death was a great shock to all his friends and companions; in full health and strength, he attended to business on Friday; spending the evening with his family, and retiring as usual, without a sign of illness. During the night, the Angel of Death, who had spared him through so many battles where his comrades were swept off on every side of him, called him to another and a better world; he passed away peacefully, without a struggle.

The respect in which our deceased companion was held is shown by the vast concourse of citizens that attended the funeral, which was conducted under the auspices of the Knights Templar, Grand Army of the Republic, and Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

Loving friends, Companions of our Order, followed his remains to the grave, and tenderly laid him to rest.

The Commandery of the State of California mourns the death of a devoted Companion, and to the sorrowing widow and children extends deep sympathy in their irreparable loss.

The following extract is taken from an article in the Chicago Graphic, of Jan. 18, 1890:—

"Frederick A. Smith, the choice of the Chicago Bar Association for its president, is one of the oldest and most conspicuous members of the bar. Born at Norwood Park, Cook County, Ill., 1844, he is still in the prime of life and the fulness of strength. After a due preparatory course in the public schools of Chicago, he entered the Chicago University, and was pursuing his studies there, when, in 1863, he enlisted as a private in the 134th Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, and participated in the Kentucky and Missouri campaigns until his regiment was mustered out of service. Resuming his studies at the University, at the close of the war, he was graduated with high honors, 1866. Choosing the profession of the law, he pursued a course of study in the Union College of Law, Chicago, and upon his graduation, he was admitted to the bar.

"Prior to this, as a clerk in the law office of Bates & Towsley, he had made himself familiar with the forms of law procedure and practice in the courts of law and the practical application of the law to business affairs. Upon admission to the bar, he formed a partnership with Mr. C. C. Kohlsaas, under the firm name of Smith & Kohlsaas, which continued until 1872.

"By industry and studious attention to his professional studies, Mr. Smith has achieved an enviable success and prominence, and has gathered around him a large and reliable clientage. As a member of the Union League Club, he has taken a quiet but earnest interest in the work of the Club. He is, also, a member of the Law Club, one of the best and most successful organizations in this city. In 1887 he was chosen president of the Law Club, and at the expiration of his term of office, was re-elected to the same position. He is now the senior member of the law firm of Smith, Helmer & Moulton.

"He has been prominently identified with educational and benevolent enterprises. The esteem in which he is held in his own profession is sustained by his general reputation as a gentleman of ability, culture, and unswerving integrity. In politics, a stanch Republican, he has never aspired to political distinction; devoting himself to the practice of his profession with earnestness and perseverance, as affording the best field for the development of his best abilities."
